A Catholic education down south

MARCELLIN Technical College, located at Christie Downs, represents a new opportunity for Catholic education in the southern suburbs.

Formerly the Australian Technical College - Adelaide South, the college secures school-based apprenticeships and training specific to students' trade interests while they finish their SACE.

Marcellin Technical College is a Catholic secondary school operating under the charism of its namesake, Marcellin Champagnat, the founder of the Marists.

It provides an alternative feeder for senior secondary students (Years 11 and 12) seeking a genuine career pathway that nurtures their development.

The college promotes personalised learning and one-on-one attention. Industry-qualified lecturers and experienced mentors deliver training in specific areas of trade while maintaining close contact with parents and training providers.

While traditional trade areas of construction, metal fabrication, machining, automotive and electrotechnology are featured, the College is branching out into emerging professions. These include business studies, horticulture, hospitality/cookery and animal studies from 2010.

The college, in partnership with the Australian Institute of Management (AIM) and other providers, is also extending its expertise to the public in launching a suite of business short courses and community short courses.

Marcellin Technical College is also holding its Open Day on Sunday, May 30. There are two scheduled sessions: the first at 11am-12.30pm and the second from 2pm-3.30pm, with registrations essential.

AIM For further information about Open Day and enrolments at Marcellin Technical College, phone 8186 9700 or visit mtc.sa.edu.au
